

More Big Glass Prices

Glass International of Medford Lakes, New Jersey, achieved some big prices at its absentee auction that closed on November 1, 2002, according to a press release.

A Thomas Cains lamp, 1815-20, Phoenix Glass Works, South Boston, Massachusetts, clear and deep blue, sold for $18,150 (includes buyer's premium) to a New York City glass collector.

An 18th-century New Jersey aquamarine broken swirl pattern barrel mug brought $17,600 from folk art collector Anthony Picadio of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, who also bought several other lots of South Jersey glass. John DeCaro of Glass International said, "It is very gratifying to see folk art collectors buying choice pieces of early American blown glass."

For more information, call (609) 714-2595.

A South Jersey 32-rib handled jug brought $9240, and a green Zanesville club bottle brought $5500.